Welcome to a Season of Magic, Myth and Marvel!

Perhaps the time has come for an unequivocal declaration that the Stratford Festival is one of the best things Canada has ever done.

This year we celebrate its 40th Anniversary with love and gratitude for those whose courage and patience and skill made it possible at the beginning and for all those who have till now ensured its continuation.

"Poetry makes nothing happen," wrote the poet W.H. Auden. In other words, the artist is not 'effective' as is, say, the politician or the banker or the plumber.

Throughout the English-speaking world, beset by recession and loss of national confidence, governments endorse this apparent disbelief in the value of the arts by reducing subsidies and forcing art into the marketplace where its greatest achievements are not accustomed to take place.

Stratford is only one of many artistic institutions currently experiencing the severe pressure of an economic climate we are powerless to alter.

There are two alternative responses: rancour at the intransigence of a government whose record of support for the arts at present is one of the worst in the West. Or joy. Joy that in so bleak a world our work consists of presenting some of the masterpieces of the art of theatre at a time when their relevance and necessity has never seemed to us so acute and poignant.

Later in the same poem Auden wrote:

*"Follow, poet, follow right
To the bottom of the night,
With your unconstraining voice
Still persuade us to rejoice;..."*

When uncertainty, cynicism and false witness seem to preoccupy the media and dismay the public we can, if we will, find in the arts a last resort from where we can hear the unflinching voices across the centuries remind us that the struggle is endless and that man's reach should exceed his grasp or what's a heaven for?

William Shakespeare

1558 - Accession of Queen Elizabeth I. 1564 - William Shakespeare christened. He was one of five surviving children of John Shakespeare and Mary Arden of Henley Street, Stratford-upon-Avon. William probably attended the Edward VI Grammar School in Stratford. 1575/6 - John Shakespeare, who is believed to have been a glover, became an alderman of Stratford. Ten years later he lost his position, probably because he was in debt and dared not go out to perform his public duties for fear of arrest. 1585 - A marriage licence was issued for William Shakespeare and Anne Hathaway. Shakespeare was, at eighteen, eight years younger than Anne, who was pregnant at the time of their marriage. 1588 - The christening of Susanna Shakespeare, William's daughter. 1585 - Christening of Hamnet (who lived only nine years) and his twin Judith. 1585/91 - The 'lost years' for which we have no records relating to Shakespeare. He may have worked for his father or have become a teacher at the Grammar School. It is also possible that he spent part of his time in Italy. 1592 - Shakespeare's first known plays, Henry VI Parts 1, 2 and 3. 1592/3 - Titus Andronicus 1592 - Venus and Adonis 1593 - Richard III, Death of Christopher Marlowe. 1593/4 - Love's Labour's Lost 1593/6 - The Sonnets probably written over this period. - The Comedy of Errors, The Taming of the Shrew, The Rape of Lucrece, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, The Lord Chamberlain's Men established. In 1595, Shakespeare listed as an actor. Burbage and Kemp were also members of this company, Richard II. 1594/6 - A Midsummer Night's Dream, Romeo and Juliet, - King John 1596 - A coat of arms was granted to John Shakespeare. 1596/7 - Henry IV Part 1, The Merchant of Venice 1597 - William Shakespeare, obviously enriched by his earnings as one of London's most successful playwrights, bought New Place, one of the finest houses in Stratford. There is no indication that he spent very much time in Stratford at this period. 1597/8 - Henry IV Part 2, Much Ado About Nothing, The Merry Wives of Windsor. 1599 - The opening of the Globe Theatre, in which Shakespeare was a 'sharer' (i.e. part owner). The Globe was built from the materials used in The Theatre which was dismantled and rebuilt on Bankside to become the home of the Lord Chamberlain's Men. Henry V, Julius Caesar 1600 - As You Like It 1601/3 - Hamlet. Shakespeare probably sold this play outright, like the others for about £12. Twelfth Night, The Phoenix and the Turtle, Troilus and Cressida, All's Well That Ends Well. 1603 - On the accession of James I, the Lord Chamberlain's Men, with which Shakespeare was still associated, became the King's Men. 1604 - Measure for Measure, Othello. 1605/7 - Macbeth, King Lear, Antony and Cleopatra, Timon of Athens. 1607 - The marriage of Shakespeare's daughter Susanna to Dr. John Hall. Hall's Croft in Stratford became their home. 1607/8 - Pericles, Coriolanus. 1609 - The Blackfriars Theatre became the winter home of the King's Men while in summer they remained at the Globe, which, being open-roofed, was exposed to the weather. Shakespeare paid £100 for his share in Blackfriars. 1609/11 - Cymbeline, The Winter's Tale, The Tempest 1612 - Shakespeare described as 'of Stratford-on-Avon, gentleman'. 1612/13 The Two Noble Kinsmen, Henry VIII. The Globe Theatre burned down during its first performance. 1616 - Shakespeare's daughter Judith married Thomas Quinney. Death of Shakespeare aged 52. He is buried in Stratford Parish Church. Most of his estate was left to Susanna. 1642 - the Playhouse closed by the Puritans. The theatre remained suppressed until the restoration of Charles II.

Romeo and Juliet

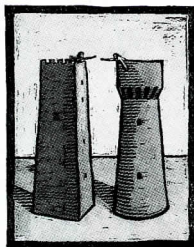

by William Shakespeare

After a brawl between the rival families of Montague and Capulet, the Prince of Verona threatens with death "anyone who disturbs our streets again." Romeo, Montague's heir, attends a masked ball at the Capulet's and becomes "infatuated" with Capulet's daughter, Juliet. From the garden he overhears her avowal of love for him as she stands on her balcony. Romeo makes his presence known and they profess their mutual love. Next afternoon Friar Lawrence marries them in secret.

When Romeo refuses to fight with Tybalt, a passionate Capulet, the gallant Mercutio takes the challenge himself. He is killed by mischance and Romeo, enraged, kills Tybalt. In his absence the Prince banishes him; the Friar tells him to stay the night with Juliet and then wait in Mantua until recall is possible.

Juliet's father insists that she shall marry a young nobleman, Paris. She gets no aid from either her mother or her nurse, and the Friar gives her an opiate that will put her in a death-like trance. She will be laid in the Capulet vault, and when she wakes, Romeo will be there.

Juliet is duly placed in the vault as dead, but the Friar's messenger to Mantua miscarries; hearing only of Juliet's "death" Romeo hastens to the tomb at night and is surprised by Paris, whom he kills. Romeo drinks poison he has bought from a Mantuan apothecary, and dies by Juliet's side. She wakes as the desperate Friar enters, and on seeing Romeo dead, stabs herself. The Prince and the heads of the families are roused; over the bodies of their children Capulet and Montague are reconciled, and the Prince closes the play: "For never was a story of more woe/ Than this of Juliet and her Romeo."

"Two households,
both alike in dignity/
In fair Verona, where we lay our scene/ From ancient grudge break to new mutiny/ Where civil blood makes civil hands unclean."

Romeo and Juliet: Transcendent Lovers

by Ronald Bryden

Ronald Bryden teaches drama at the Graduate Centre for the Study of Drama at the University of Toronto. He was a member of the Stratford Board of Governors from 1978 to 1984.

Audiences always have a soft spot for Romeo and Juliet. Most of us encountered it in high school, gained from it our first notions of romance and so associate it in memory with our own first loves. It introduced us to love's fever, manic depression and conviction that happiness is worth dying for. It's been said that the unique power of Shakespeare's tragedies is that their protagonists - Hamlet, Macbeth, Lear, Cleopatra - become ourselves: open their minds to us so powerfully that we become them and they us. If so, it's a trick he learned writing his young lovers of Verona. In spite of their odd habit of talking in fragmented sonnets and antique puns, they speak for us.

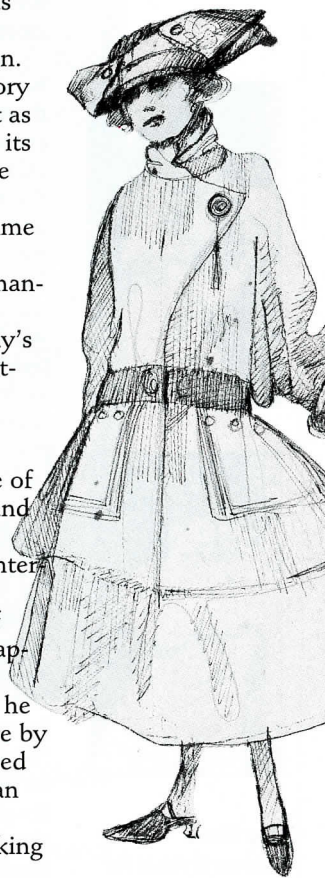

The problem is, we project our soft spot on to the play itself, like a bruise on a peach. We wreath it in our own nostalgia, our memories of moonlight, honeysuckle and long, long kisses. No other Shakespeare play gets so overlaid in production with velvet, marbled columns, fancy lighting and echoes of Fra Angelico. No story has had so much sumptuous music piled on it, by Berlioz, Gounod, Tchaikovsky, Prokofiev and Leonard Bernstein. What we carry away from Romeo and Juliet is the memory of romance, and if our next meeting with the play isn't as romantic as the last, we complain bitterly. As a result, its productions vie with each other in peachiness, with the squashy results I've described.

It's time we broke out of this vicious circle. It's time we looked more closely at the other ingredients Shakespeare rubbed together to create the blaze of romantic delirium at the centre of his play. It is not done by pouring on rosewater - the dominant images of the play's love poetry are knives, blades, poisons, infections, lightning, meteors and ill omens. We're made to feel that what Romeo and Juliet experience is rare and precious because so unusual, short-lived and perpetually under threat. Their love seems intense and beautiful because of its contrast with the teeming world of prosaic, comic and unromantic life surrounding it. Flood the play with enchantment, and it goes curiously flat, bland and uninteresting.

Tyrone Guthrie wrote introductions to a series of Shakespeare texts for schools in the 1950s, aimed at hapless young teachers getting up a class play for the first time. With his bare Stratford stage obviously in mind, he explained how meaning has to be created in the theatre by opposition. Darkness is only dark relative to light, speed only speedy in contrast with slowness. Short actors can be made to seem tall if surrounded by others on their knees, as Edwin Booth surrounded himself when invoking the curse of Rome in Bulwer Lytton's Richelieu. Shakespeare creates his lovers' transcendent fever in Romeo and Juliet in large part by setting them against a densely wrought background of the humdrum, unimaginative and restrictive life they want to transcend. We see that they're romantic because they are shown the prosaic world that is opposed to them.

With Romeo and Juliet, Shakespeare was trying to write a new kind of tragedy. Traditional tragedies were about good deaths: protagonists who rose to the challenge of the worst life brings to us, accepting with calm and fortitude that every life must have an end. The essence of a good death was readiness for it: accounts settled, old scores paid off, enemies forgiven, last words said.

Bottom Photo

A bad death was one which came too quickly for preparation: by accident, sudden violence or murder, random and unexpected. By definition, all young deaths are bad deaths, coming too soon, before the young victim has lived long enough to learn how to leave the world behind. The death of young people could scarcely be tragic, consoling or edifying in any way. It was simply horrifying, a breach in nature, a wound to the cycle of the community's existence.

Shakespeare wants the deaths of Romeo and Juliet to be all those things - they must horrify Verona into ending their families' feud. But he also wanted to create tragic emotion around their last embrace. He distinguishes very clearly between their deaths for example, and Mercutio's - the worst possible kind of bad death, premature, senseless, sudden as a thunderclap. Through the lovers' poetry runs a progressive retreat from day to night and beyond, from sun to moon to stars and finally the starless gloom of the Capulets' monument. The sun presides over the workaday Verona which has no room for love; presides over pride, envy, enmity and cruel family decorum which keeps the lovers apart. Night, the realm of Queen Mab, moon and stars, seems friendlier at first; but the moon proves inconstant, the stars that govern their destinies unfavourable. In the end, the only place the lovers can be free of the hostile world and the planetary influences opposed to their passion is the tomb's "palace of dim night".

"This is the monstrosity of love," declares Troilus in Troilus and Cressida, "that the will is infinite and the execution confined; that the desire is boundless, and the act a slave to limit." Romeo and Juliet defy not only the stars but all of nature by pursuing a passion beyond the normal human course of things. This makes their end a pair of "bad deaths", brought about by folly, mischance, a refusal to be reconciled to life as the majority of folk have to live it - painful, unnecessary, shockingly wrong as all young deaths must seem to be. Yet at the same time there is a kind of grandeur in their rejection of common sense and the possible. Undoubtedly their deaths also are "good", tragic deaths in that they have willed them, accepted them as inevitable with bravery and exaltation. The mixture of emotions Shakespeare wants from us at the end of the play is too complex, too dependent on the tension between the lovers' ideal kingdom of infinite ecstasy and the reality of the world in which they have to live, for the single flavour Romance to do it justice. If we're honest, we'll agree with Mercutio that, compared with the fun, friendship, dirty jokes, flirting and horseplay that he shares with Romeo in the streets of Verona, a diet of undiluted love, pure love, can be boring.

HMS Pinafore

For forty years, the Stratford Festival has stood as one of Canada's great cultural treasures.

The comical misadventures of Captain Corcoran and his crew have entertained generations of theatre-goers for more than a century.

And since 1870, The Mutual Group has been helping Canadians plan for their financial security.

This season, we're proud to sponsor HMS Pinafore on the Avon Stage as our way of celebrating four decades of theatrical excellence.

SC 400
Luxury Sports Coupe

Any Indecision On Your Part

The decision to purchase a Lexus is one which more and more people are making. After all, our relentless pursuit of perfection has resulted in a new level of automobile; one embraced by critics and owners alike. But by offering this quality in three distinct models, the question becomes, "which Lexus to choose?"

For some it will be the Lexus LS400 luxury performance sedan. An elegant, wood-trimmed leather-upholstered sanctuary coupled with an invigorating 4.0 litre, 32-valve 250 horsepower technological masterpiece.

For others, it might be the SC400 luxury sports coupe. Rakish styling borne out by an equally sumptuous interior and exhilarating performance capabilities.

Still others may deem the Lexus ES300 to be perfect. For in this luxury sports sedan, true Lexus engineering and design find a wider audience by virtue of its level of accessibility.

High-Style, High-Fidelity.

D-200S PERSONAL COMPONENT SYSTEM

There's a school of music lovers that doesn't care what audio equipment looks like as long as it sounds good. And another that doesn't really care what it sounds like as long as it looks good.

Denon is proud to announce that, with the introduction of the D-Series Personal Component Systems, the sound-conscious and the style-conscious have been gracefully united—once and for all.

Although the D-Series systems are less than 1/2 the size of conventional systems, each consists of genuine hi-fi components, not mere look-alikes. They are constructed with strong metal chassis and front panels, high-current power supplies, and wide-bandwidth, low-noise circuitry, all hallmarks of high performance audio gear.

In the spirit of separate components, you can choose a D-Series system (D-150 or D-200S) that's exactly right for you, giving you the option of a 6-disc CD changer; a horizontal-loading, auto-reverse Dolby® cassette deck; powerful, super sensitive AM/FM receivers and high performance, magnetically-shielded compact speakers.

With the Denon D-Series, the definition of style goes far deeper than appearance: not only do they all offer integrated remote control, they add such intuitive operational control as one-touch source selection and one-touch recording.

The Denon D-Series. The high fidelity components that are a joy to be heard and to behold.

DENON
The first name in digital audio.

A Salute to Corporate Sponsors

President's Message

The enduring success of the Stratford Festival and its realization of 40 seasons of great theatre is just cause for a wealth of celebrations and expressions of thanks to all those who shared the faith.

Not the least of these worthy supporters are the hundreds of companies at home and abroad whose partnerships with us throughout the years have been an immeasurable source of encouragement and inspiration.

It is with pride and gratitude that I present our leading corporate philanthropists in our 40th season and, on behalf of everyone at the Festival, applaud them for their contribution to the present and future triumphs of Canadian theatre.

Audience Services

First Aid will be rendered by members of the Ambulance and Nursing Division of the St. John Ambulance Brigade.

Restrooms are located on the lower level below the foyer and on the second floor.

Cameras, tape recorders, personal stereos and pagers must be checked at the House Manager's Office before entering the theatre.

Latecomers and Persons leaving during the performance will not be admitted until a suitable break.

Smoking is not permitted in the auditorium.

Refreshments are not permitted in the auditorium.

Bar facilities: The upstairs Chalmers Lounge is open for one hour preceding all performances (except student matinees) and after evening shows.

An infra-red hearing-assistance system has been installed in this theatre. Receivers are available, for a rental fee, from the Box Office.

Patrons are asked, in the interests of safety, to refrain from walking across the stage at any time.

Noise: Coughing, rustling papers and bleeping of watches/pagers disturb the performers and members of the audience. Pagers can be left with the House Manager in the lobby.

Driver's side air bag is now standard equipment on all 1992 models of the Chrysler Magic Wagon.

If each generation is smarter than the last, the new MagicWagon approaches genius. The newest ard driver's Side air bag. For added peace of mind, the new MagicWagon can be equipped with all-wheel-drive and 4-wheel anti-lock braking system. We've even built more comfort into our new Owner's Choice Protection Plan. It offers you a choice of warranty coverage between 7 years/115,000 kilometres on the powertrain, or 3 years/60,000 kilometres bumper to bumper.* And consider this: Chrysler's Windsor minivan plant is the only automotive facility to win the prestigious Canada Awards for Business Excellence in the Quality category. All of which adds up to a simple fact: the world's most popular minivan is still doing what it did when it first appeared. Making all of our competitors very uncomfortable.
